Kansas City military families enjoy holiday baskets from Pioneer Services

Pioneer Services food drive

Associates at Pioneer Services' Kansas City headquarters are getting into the holiday spirit by continuing the tradition of donating food baskets to local military families in need. To make things interesting, the company turned the drive into an interdepartmental challenge, and the friendly competition to raise money and food turned into an enormous success for everyone involved.

Working with the Kansas City chapter of the Association of the United States Army (which will distribute the donations to military families), Pioneer Services associates collected and donated more than 3,000 cans of food, hams, and turkeys over a two-week period. The food baskets will be delivered directly to AUSA from Pioneer Services associates this week.

"It's a nice feeling for our associates to be able to give back to their local military community, especially during the holidays when there are always a number of families in need," said Corporate Affairs Manager Emily Wilson, who coordinated the food drive. "Taking care of service members is what we do at Pioneer Services. The food drive is just a small thing we do to show military families our appreciation for their service and continued sacrifice."

Delivering food baskets to military families is just another way that Pioneer Services, the military banking division of MidCountry Bank, offers responsible financial services and education to members of the Armed Forces that enhance their quality of life and financial independence. For more than 20 years, Pioneer Services has been a leader in military lending. They offer the protection and security of a personal loan with the speed and flexibility service members need. Through a network of offices and on the Internet, Pioneer Services offers loans, financial education programs, and supports military families and communities through a variety of partnerships,
